Construction work on the Warsaw subway was greatly reduced at the end of June for unknown reasons. Approximately 1,200 construction workers have been transferred to other building sites, some to the reconstruction work of Stare Miasto (an old quarter of Warsaw, destroyed during the uprising in 1944). The majority, however, have already been, or soon will be, transferred to the district of Krakow, where it is possible that they will be employed at the Nowa Huta project.
